Loud car stereos

Under the Road Vehicles (Construction and Use) Regulations 1986 it is an offence for a person to use a motor vehicle in such a manner as to cause any excessive noise which could be avoided by the exercise of reasonable care by the driver.

This offence can be punishable by way of a £30 Fixed Penalty Notice (FPN).

If you have your stereo on so loud that it can be clearly heard outside your car either with the windows down or, even worse, with the windows up then it is too loud.

In order to help people feel safe and reduce the discomfort people suffer due to loud stereos, we would ask you to consider your impact on others and turn the volume and/or bass down.

We don't want to stop people enjoying their music within their own vehicles but at the same time we don't want people to have to listen to other people's music as they walk or drive down the road or sit in their homes.

Therefore we are using this opportunity to inform motorists of the impact their loud music is having.

We are carrying out enforcement activity where motorists committing this type of offence will be issued FPNs.
